VETERANS CLUB IS FORMED HERE FOR OLDER EMPLOYEES

Ellenen Workers To Promote Social Relations

LEE ELECTED AS CHAIRMAN

Annual Picnic Will be One Of Events To Be Promoted

A unit of the Louisville and Nashville Veterans Club was organized here last night at a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. The meeting was called to order by Percy Parker, temporary chairman, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Lawrence W. Lee, permanent chairman for the ensuing term; Percy Parker, vice-chairman; E. S. Hinds, secretary-treasurer.

The "Old Reliable" now boasts of a system-wide social organization, the Louisville and Nashville Veterans Club. In the neighborhood of 1,000 employees are enrolled. All white L. and N. employees of 25 years or longer are eligible.

On September 18 delegates representing nearly all of the operating divisions and all departments of the railroad, met in Louisville and perfected the organization.

The organization was incorporated under the laws of Kentucky and is on a sound financial basis.

The meeting last night perfected the local club of the organization and has an enrollment here of about 50 members. Some 25 or 30 additional employees are eligible for membership and their membership is expected to be obtained by the time of the next meeting on the first Tuesday night in November.

Rev. James D. Hunter, pastor of the Central Methodist church, last night delivered a fine address to the assemblage, stressing steadfastness, dependability, efficiency and loyalty.

The objects of the organization are to foster and attitude of brotherly kindness and to promote the general welfare of the members through a spirit of benevolence in social organization, co-operation and cultivation of friendly relations by and between all Louisville and Nashville employees.

An annual picnic for members and their friends will be held at a time and place to be selected by the board of directors.

Weather Help In Cotton Picking

The weather has been a big help in picking cotton this fall, D. D. Lake, prominent farmer of the Neale community, reported today. "It has been the finest fall for gathering the crop I ever saw," he said, "and the crop is nearly all out in our section." The good weather has kept the grade fairly high, it was stated.

Lull In Brick Industry Seen

While a slight lull in the sale of brick is seen here, orders are still coming in from Florida points, it was stated today. Brick shipments have not reached the October peak expected, but Florida continues to purchase the Albany-Decatur product, proving that the state recently visited by a terrific hurricane is rising from the debris.

FROST EXPECTED

Observers declare there has been no frost yet in this section, although such an eventuality is not unexpected, with a night temperature last night of 61. The temperature today had climbed to 85.

TAX QUESTION IS DELAYED BY BOARD

Proposal To Increase Rate In Albany Is Held Over

The proposal to increase the tax rate in the city of Albany two mills was held over by the council, meeting in adjourned session last night, until Thursday evening, October 28.

In an election sometime ago, the voters of the City of Albany authorized an increase in the tax rate a total of five mills. The council, however, at that time only took advantage of the authorization to the extent of three mills, hoping that increase would be sufficient.

The new council may increase the rate only one mill, or may increase it two, in which event the entire authorization would be utilized.

Two Banks Made Depositories

Under a resolution adopted by the Albany council Monday evening, the two local banks, the Morgan County and the Central National banks are made city depositories. The Central will have the general fund, the Morgan County the school fund, and both institutions will share equally in the public improvement fund.

SULPHURIC ACID ENDANGERS THE LIVES OF 70 STUDENTS

SOMERSET, Ky., Oct. 19.—(AP)—School and county authorities of Pulaski county are investigating what they believe was a plot to poison 70 pupils of the Short Creek school, near here yesterday. Mrs. Bertha Mize, teacher, discovered that some liquid, believed to be sulphuric acid, had been poured in the water cooler. The liquid has been sent to the state university for examination and authorities say that if it develops to be that poison was put in the water, a

FAIRFIELD MAY BE ANOTHER 'VICTIM' AMNESIA ATTACK

Pharmacist Is Sought By Police After Disappearance

STALLINGS ON HIS WAY HOME

No Reason Assigned For Disappearance Of Williams

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 19.—(AP)—The police of Fairfield today were called upon to aid in the search for William Raymond Williams, 27, believed to be a victim of amnesia.

Williams resides at 1624 Fifty-second street, Central Park, and was employed as a pharmacist at the Bowen pharmacy, 37th street and Bessemer boulevard. He left home at noon Saturday, informing his wife that he was going to Birmingham to mail a package. The last time he was seen was when he left an inbound trolley at Loveman's corner. No reason could be assigned for his absence, according to his wife, who believes he is suffering from a loss of memory, as he complained of extremely painful headaches on several occasions last week.

Walter S. Stallings, Jr., who was found in the waiting room of the Kansas City railroad station Sunday morning, suffering from partial paralysis and loss of memory, was expected to return to Birmingham today, three days following his mysterious disappearance from this city and his reported death in an automobile accident on the Montgomery highway.

He is accompanied by his father, who is general secretary of the Birmingham Y. M. C. A., and his 20-year old wife, who hastened to the Missouri city Monday, upon receipt of a telegram from Dr. James Baty, his former teacher in the Simpson high school.

Marie Prays At Soldier's Tomb

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Marie, of Rumania, paid queenly tribute to the past and present glories of American democracy, as she paused for a while today on the threshold of her trip across the continent. Attracted by the emotions of a sovereign, who had seen her own Balkin kingdom overrun by the swelling tide of the great war, she first went in state to Arlington and, in the name of her government and people, offered up a silent prayer at the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Then the royal motorcade rolled across the Virginia hills to Mt. Vernon, the home and tomb of Washington, 20 miles down the Potomac.

Late in the day she was to call formally upon the President and Mrs. Coolidge were to make a return visit immediately after to the Rumanian legation. Tonight the royal visitor will be a guest of a white house dinner.

The trip to Arlington was Queen Marie's first official act on American soil.

large reward will be offered for the guilty person.

Mrs. Mize said she noticed the water looked peculiar and upon opening the top of the cooler smoke poured from it. None of the children had drunk any of the water.

Window panes and lights were broken out of the school Sunday night. Authorities are unable to find any motive for the deeds but are making a careful search for the miscreants and feeling is high.

Curb Market Plans Discussed; February Opening Is Planned

NINE DWELLINGS TO BE BUILT BY REEVES AND SON

Lots Are Purchased Through Penney and Whitman

EIGHT HOUSES IN FREY AREA

Material Assembled For Project; Work Starts at Once

Announcement was made today of the purchase by W. S. Reeves and Son of nine lots through Penney and Whitman, local real estate and insurance agency. Reeves and Son, well known contractors, plan the erection immediately of nine new residences here.

The completion of this group of nine residences will bring the total of the contracting firm to approximately half a hundred during the past 18 months. Most of these residences have been bought and are occupied now by the owners.

Eight of the lots are located in West Decatur in the area known as the "Frey addition" and when the eight new residences are finished in that section, it will give additional evidence of being one of the fast growing residential neighborhoods in the cities.

Since the completion of street paving in West Decatur, building has gone forward rapidly and the vacant territory is being utilized for numbers of new houses.

The ninth lot purchased by Reeves and Son is located in South Albany and an attractive dwelling will be erected there.

Material for the big construction program is being assembled.

Man's Death Yet Veiled In Mystery

TULSA, Okla., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Still veiled in mystery, Mayes county officers this morning were continuing their investigation of the murder of L. Floyd Greer, Spanivaw sporting goods merchant, formerly of Birmingham, for whose death his wife now is being held in the county jail, and a county-wide search has been instituted for Ben Schue, an alleged accomplice in the slaying.

Greer was found dead in his home Saturday. Search for the murder weapon which has assumed an added significance in view of the gathering of additional evidence by the investigators, thus far has been futile.

This was disclosed this morning when Sheriff Charles Kelly disclosed reports that Greer had been beaten over the head with a hammer.

Retail Food Prices Show An Increase

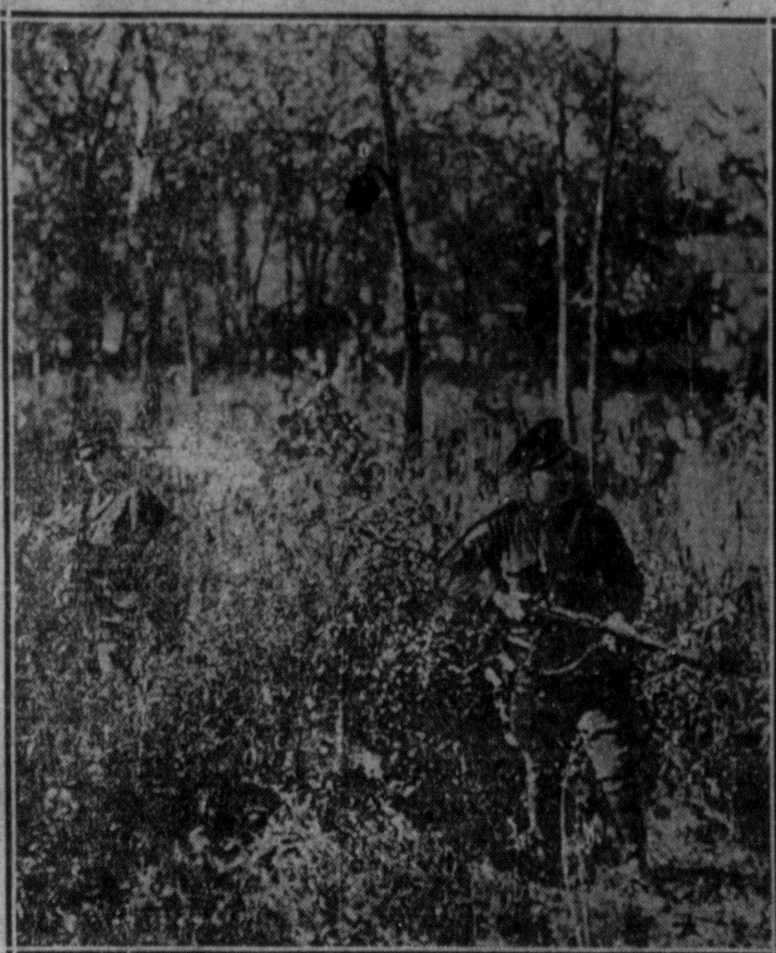

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Retail food prices on September 15 showed an increase of approximately 1 3-4 per cent over those of August 15, the department of labor reported today.

Prices however were more than 54 1-2 per cent higher than those of September 15, 1923.

The largest increase noted in the month was that of strictly fresh eggs, which jumped 15 per cent, while potatoes rose 8 per cent, pork chops 5 per cent and butter 4 per cent.

The price of onions, dropped the most, declining 10 per cent, while macaroni fell 4, and canned red salmon and flour decreased 3 per cent each.

FARM COMMITTEE RESUMES TASKS

Cotton Growers Are In Conference With Board

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Resuming negotiations, looking to a solution of the South's problem in disposing of its record cotton crop, the committee appointed by President Coolidge to consider the situation held another meeting today, prior to the cabinet meeting.

Later, Eugene Meyer, chairman of the committee, conferred again with representatives of the American Cotton Growers Exchange, who held a lengthy conference yesterday with the committee. There were indications that a definite plan of procedure would be agreed upon shortly, bearing the endorsement of the President's committee.

Further conferences were planned for later in the day.

President Coolidge received members of the committee sent here by the American Cotton Growers' Exchange at an informal reception at the White House. This committee is headed by John Orr, of Dallas, Texas.

George R. James, of the federal reserve board, and A. C. Williams, of the federal farm loan board, were added by President Coolidge today to the cotton committee.

SEED MEN ACT

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 19.—(AP)—A resolution, calling upon cotton oil mills to "stop selling short" and expressing the belief that crude oil should sell for "not less than eight cents" was offered to representatives of cotton seed crushers of the country, meeting here today to plan relief measures.

President Sees Only Slight Hope For Revision

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—A remarkable plea for removal of the tariff bearers and other restrictions upon European trade was issued here today over the signatures of scores of the leading financiers of Europe and a half dozen Americans, headed by J. P. Morgan.

There can be no recovery in Europe, the manifesto declared, until the politicians realize that "in time of peace our neighbors are our customers and that their prosperity is a condition of our own living."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—President Coolidge, though without specific information as to the manifesto, asking tariff changes, considers there is a good deal of difference between the methods and purposes of tariff duties raised by European states and the tariff system of the United States.

Off-hand, the President was said to doubt if much could be done by tariff changes to stimulate European trade without jeopardizing the position of America and its standard of living. Those who lend money between nations naturally are in favor of practically free trade, it was said at the white house and the same is true of those who import, whereas wage earners and manufacturers desire protection. The President believes the manifesto concerns more the European states in that their standards of living do not differ materially and tariff walls, therefore, do not have the same effect as in this country.

BUSINESS PEOPLE GATHER WITH FARM LEADERS FOR TALK

Miss Hamilton Holds Opinion That Idea Will Be Favored

FORD PRESIDES AT THE MEETING

Kiwanis Likely Will Be Called Into the Farm Service

Business interests and Federated Women's clubs of these cities will undertake the curb market idea.

Meeting with Miss Sallye Hamilton, home demonstration agent and J. C. Ford, county farm agent, at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, business interests decided that the time is ripe for the opening of the curb market in Albany-Decatur, planned to use the products of Morgan county farmers and thus do away to great extent with the cotton crop difficulties presented each year.

With Mr. Ford presiding, Miss Hamilton was invited to outline the plan of the curb or community market to the business men, called to percer an organization.

Miss Hamilton, having had experience with the working of such a market, outlined first the work of the demonstration and farm agents in getting the farmer to standardize products, grow additional products and bring them here to market. A suitable building will be provided for the products which will be displayed perhaps twice a week to begin with, the number of days to be increased so soon as the plan proves popular with Albany-Decatur housewives.

While standardization of products will form the principle work of the demonstrators, the women's clubs and business interests of these cities are called upon to sell the idea locally.

Miss Hamilton is scheduled to address the Kiwanis club Thursday evening, bringing the plan before the largest civic body in the cities. Other state workers will come here to show local people just what is expected from both the

LAW IS MOVING TO AVENGE THE DEATH OF PROH OFFICIAL

Pleas Of Guilty Are Entered By Four Defendants

2 CASES ARE NOL PROSSED

Two Men Previously Had Been Found Guilty By Jury

ONEONTA, Ala., Oct. 19.—(AP)

Four men, accused of conspiracy in the slaying of Federal Prohibition Officer R. W. Buckner, of Birmingham, killed in a raid near here last May, pleaded guilty in Blount county circuit court and were sentenced late Monday. The cases of two others were nol prossed. Two others, in trials last week, were convicted. The eight farmers were arrested, following a raid on a mountain still.

The men pleading guilty and their sentences follow: Harold Lawrence, manslaughter in the first degree, six and one half years; distilling, a year to a year and a half.

Dozier Colley, manslaughter in the first degree, five and one half years; distilling, a year to a year and a half.

Ocie Colley, same sentence as Dozier.

John Colley, manslaughter, three years; distilling, a year to a year and a half.

The men whose cases were nol prossed were:

John Phillips, charged with conspiracy to slay Buckner.

John Watson, charged with distilling.

In previous trials, Joel Colley was sentenced to 25 years for murder in the second degree, witnesses having testified that he fired the shot that killed the officer.

Leroy Hodges was convicted of manslaughter in the first degree and given six and a half years.

Feed Crops Are Best In Years

Feed crops in Morgan county furnish the brightest side of the county agricultural situation, according to J. C. Ford, county farm agent. Feed crops over the county are the best in many years, say observers and will go far toward removing the pessimism felt in farm circles regarding the cotton situation.

NORRIS, MILITANT PASTOR-SLAYER, EXPECTS AN ACQUITTAL

FORT WORTH MAN TO GO ON TRIAL ON NOVEMBER 1

There Can Be But One Outcome to My Case, Says Preacher

NORRIS HOLDS ON TO TONGUE

Talks Calmly In The Same Room He Shot Prominent Man

BY LARRY L. SISK
International News Service Staff Correspondent

FORT WORTH, Tex.—"There can be but one outcome to my trial and that is acquittal."

This was the declaration of Rev. J. Frank Norris, militant pastor of the First Baptist church of Fort Worth, when he was visited in his study. It was the same room in which on July 17, Rev. Norris shot and killed D. E. Chipps, prominent Fort Worth lumberman.

He referred to his trial, scheduled for November 1, in district court, on a charge of murder in connection with the killing of Rev. Chipps. In a statement by Rev. Norris after the killing, and in statements since then, it is said Norris will claim he killed Chipps in self defense, after Norris felt reasonably sure his own life was in danger.

"I am not talking about anything now and do not want my case to be tried in the papers before it goes to court," Rev. Norris said. "I even have quit seeing newspaper reporters and others, but I always am glad to see an old friend."

He Has Changed
He is not the same Norris of a year ago. The vigorous actions, and the snapping of his eyes are gone. He talks more slowly and his dark encircled eyes have lost part of their former brightness. His face and lips are drawn—all showing the mental trial and worry he has gone through.

The study of the pastor is different, also, from what it was on that warm Saturday evening, just before 6 o'clock, on July 17. Then—the prone body of Chipps lay on the floor, police officials and newspaper men stood around as if awestricken in the presence of death. Now, young women secretaries and assistant secretaries to Norris and other church officials, are bustling in and out. Visitors are told that "Rev. Norris is seeing no one today." The offices of the First Baptist church and the Searchlight, the church's weekly newspaper, in adjoining rooms are busy places, caring for the incoming subscriptions to the minister's defense fund and order for the newspaper.

Church Growing
"Yes, sir," declared the pastor, "I always thought my church here was a big one, but by recent progress, I realize that it is just beginning to grow."

When asked how he was feeling, Norris reminded the visitor that he was not being interviewed. "But," he added, "You may use anything I have said in my sermons during the last few weeks, if you wish."

Rev. Norris then had his secretary bring in stenographic copies of his sermons and pointed out excerpts that, he said, express his feeling more than anything he could say now.

This unusual review, now takes the form of the minister-pastor, being quoted from notes he made for his sermons, as follows:

"All fair and just men will give a minister the same right as a bootlegger to defend himself, and if he doesn't do it, he is unworthy of being called a human being. To regret an act is one thing and to regret the necessity that was forced upon one is a wholly different thing.

"Far beyond our highest expectations, contrary to what our enemies thought, this heroic church, at one stroke became more solidly united, more determined and more courageous, and at the same time more tendered and more burdened.

Not Worrying
"Of course, a minister is like everybody else, and praise God we live a life out here in Texas where most people think so too. I am not concerned about what the papers say, either good or bad. I

ATHENS POLICE MAKE 11 ARRESTS

Disorders Of Minor Nature Mark The Past Week-end

By D. L. ROSENAU, Jr.

Eleven persons were arrested within the city limits of Athens from about eleven o'clock Saturday night to ten o'clock Sunday night, the local police force being hastily rushed from one point to another. The offenses were varied but of no great consequence, those arrested being accused of reckless driving, selling or possessing whiskey, wife beating, and other alleged crimes of a minor nature. Most of the alleged guilty parties answered the roll call in Mayor Sarver's court Monday morning when justice was meted out. The general behavior throughout the county, however, is excellent at the present time, no criminal cases being set for trial in inferior court this week, and the county jail having only two occupants besides the cook and caretaker.

CHURCH PRESENTS PAGEANT

The First Methodist church presented a pageant entitled "The Voice of the Future," in the auditorium Sunday night, about fifteen persons being in the cast. The pageant commemorated annual children's week and dealt with the proper influences that should be brought upon the child in its early life. Both townspeople and Athens College students took part.

am not losing any sleep over what may happen in the court house, though there isn't any doubt in anybody's mind as to the outcome. But let it come, let come what will, it will mean victory upon victory.

"No hand that has been lifted against the First Baptist church has prospered. Who is there among us who can't recall when a large group met together and drank to the death of this pastor and gave him thirty days' time to leave the city?"

Rev. Norris referred to the time, 12 years ago, when a committed warned him to leave town in 30 days, after he was charged with arson in the burning of his church. Rev. Norris was acquitted on this charge, on an instructed verdict.

"I have lived, it seems to me, a thousand years in a few days' time," the interview continues. "What is the result? Out of the depths of my heart I have come to have a more confident, conquering, reliant faith in this, the living Word of God, than I ever knew before. I have come to have—ten thousand times less—concern about the things of this world, the things that perish."

farmers holding their product rather than sell at the present price. As a result local business establishments have had almost as dull a season as in the summer months, and a "trade day" plan is proposed to be put on at once in an effort to stimulate purchases. CROPS PROGRESS WELL IN MORGAN

Cotton Alone Is Not Big Factor In The Crop Listing

By J. A. WEST

With pretty weather prevailing practically ever since the cotton season opened, there occurring at no time enough rain to damage the staple, planters have progressed with their picking operations, it is said fully sixty per cent of the crop in this section is gathered.

The ginnings here are upwards of 8,000 bales, slightly behind last year's figures, but when it is taken into account that picking operations were fully three weeks' late, this is accounted for.

Corn harvesting will begin soon as sufficient frost falls to rid the field of insects, and the crop is the best it is said for a ten year average.

Sweet potatoes are fine, though very few have found their way to market thus far.

Sorghum has been made up and is fine. Large quantities of hay are also gathered for stock and marketed for the winter, and the farmer is undoubtedly better off in this respect than some former years.

Large quantities of canned goods are on the pantry shelf, and thus comes to a close one of the greatest years for production of farm products this country has witnessed for a long time.

WORK PROGRESSES

Practically all the ditches have been dug for the water mains, and work on the water works system is progressing rapidly. A big drive is being made by those in charge to have the underground work completed before the winter rains set in. The large 50,000 tower has arrived, as has also the storage tank.

BARBECUE PLANNED

The members of the Hartselle Fishing club will enjoy a barbecue at Lake Ashworth Tuesday evening. Barbecued pork, Brunswick stew, barbecued chicken pickles and other trimmings will be on the menu, and a great time is anticipated. The affair is for club members only, and their invited guests. New Mexico Campaign Brings Charge Gov. Tried To Ban Spanish Voters

Republicans Say Pre-Election Laws Nothing More Than An Attempt To Bar The Spanish-American From Polls.

By International News Service
ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Charges that Governor A. T. Hannett and the Democratic leadership sought to disfranchise thousands of Spanish-American voters feature Republican campaign attacks during pre-election weeks in New Mexico.

The so-called Hannett election code was made the issue through which Republicans voiced assertions that the governor's reputed attempts at election law reform to impose voting restrictions that would prevent a large portion of Spanish-Americans from casting their ballots.

The election code was framed last winter by a committee of three Democrats and three Republicans and contained the provision that voters should mark their ballots without assistance unless physically incapable of doing so.

Session Not Called
The governor promised to call a special session of the legislature to enact the law if assured of its passage. The Republican senate members refused to approve it and the legislature was not called.

Efchard C. Dillon, of Epcino, a sheepman and merchant, is the Republican nominee for governor opposing Governor Hannett, who broke a precedent in the state by running for a second term. Dillon has served in the state senate and has made his campaign on promises of a business like administration.

Congressman John Morrow is a candidate for re-election on the Democratic ticket and is opposed by Juan Sedillo, youthful supreme court reporter. The state has but one representative in congress.

No vacancy occurs in the senate until 1928 when the term of Senator A. A. Jones, Las Vegas, Democrat, expires.

No National Issues

No echo of national issues has been heard in the state campaign, candidates confining themselves entirely to discussion of local policies. Prohibition was not an issue, altho a ruling held unconstitutional the state act enforcement entirely Volstead act enforcement entirely to federal officers.

Next to the governor greatest interest centered about the office of state law enforcement. Ed Swope, an appointee of Governor Hannett's is seeking re-election on his record and Benjamin F. Pankey, Santa Fe prominent cattleman, is opposing him on the Republican ticket. The state land commissioner has control of the state's vast land holdings and his position carries with it enormous power over the economic status of

College Slang Is Revelation

COLUMBUS, O.—"Listen Cookie pusher, I wanna proposition you."

"Go ahead, parlor athlete."

"I got two doves lined up for after game. Can you get the old man's chariot?"

"Nix, it costs a neat sheaf of lettuce to take out a couple of bims and I only got two rollers. Anyway, the pater's using his transportation and I'm booked for tonight with a swell blimp."

"Aw, you're a third strike."

"Tell you what, though—I can put you next to a babe what don't care if you got only Sunday School fare so long's you take her to a struggle."

"All right, see you at the game."

That, folks, is a conversation in the advanced, revised, latest newest, etc., slang on the Ohio State University campus. It's "collich chatter" that needs interpretation to the uninitiated and here's the "lowdown" on the highspots in the late 1926 model of the mythical campus dictionary of slang.

A "Cookie pusher" is a parlor athlete.

And a "parlor athlete," necessarily, is a "cookie pusher."

A "dove" is a co-ed, and she also may be a "bim," or a "blimp," or a "babe."

A "chariot" is an automobile which can also be a "buggy" or just plain "transportation."

A "sheaf of lettuce" is paper money.

"Rollers" means silver dollars.

"Third strike" is somebody or something totally useless.

"Sunday school fare" is small change.

sheepmen, cattlemen and farmers who lease or purchase state lands.

Two women oppose each other for secretary of state; for the Democratic Miss Jennie Fortune, Secorco; for the Republican, Miss Mary Bartolino, Raton.

Representatives of organized labor put their organizations on record officially early in the campaign as endorsing the Democratic ticket with the exception of two candidates, Judge C. R. Brice for supreme court, and Mrs. Aurora White for school superintendent. Republican candidates endorsed were Justice John C. Watson, incumbent, and Miss Lois Randolph, Gallup.

MARRIAGE FEVER GRIPS AUSTRALIA

Marriage Increase Is Accompanied By Birth Decline

International News Service
BRISBANE, Australia.—Latest returns show that Australia is in the grip of a marriage fever.

This year's marriage figures show a big jump on those of last year, and there are signs that the increase continues.

But while the marriage rate is increasing, the statistics show that the number of births is steadily declining.

Since the war there has been a continuous fall in the birthrate. Spread of birth control propaganda is believed to be the reason.

At the same time, the number of illegitimate births remains very high. The proportion is twice as big as in England. And, unfortunately, most of the girls concerned are very young. In 1925, 34 of these child mothers were aged fourteen or under and 62 were under 15 years of age. Another 166 were under 16 and 352 had not reached their seventeenth birthday.

On the other hand, many young girls find husbands and settle down to a happy married life. In 1925 nearly 20 per cent of the brides were under 21.

But the marrying fever, under the influence of the Australian sun, does not seem to disappear

Mission Program At Church of God

An unusual Missionary program is planned at the Church of God for Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock it was announced today by Rev. A. Q. Bridwell. The lecture "Religious Education," by Rev. G. Y. Plank, will be accompanied by stereopticon views. Rev. Bridwell urged that the public attend the program which he believed will be beneficial as well as enjoyable.

HUNGARIAN PAWNSHOPS SHOW MONEY IS TIGHTER

By International News Service
BUDAPEST.—Money is getting tighter and tighter in Hungary as measured by that infallible meter, the pawnshop. More than twice as many articles found temporary asylum in the pawnshops of Budapest during the first nine months of 1926 than a year ago.

Like Russia, most of the personal wealth of Hungarians is represented in jewels, and 157,752 jewels were pledged in the fourth month period this year as compared with only 75,735 last year. Other pledges this year totaled 285,584 and last year 136,497.

The books of the City of Gadsden are being audited by A. P. Stringer, Atlanta auditor, in order to give the financial status to the new administration officials.

with the first blush of youth. Last year there were 88 brides and 263 bridegrooms over sixty-five years of age.

Are You Overdoing?

Hurry, Worry, and Overwork Bring Heavy Strain.

MODERN life throws a heavy burden on our bodily machinery. The eliminative organs, especially the kidneys, are apt to be overtaxed and become sluggish. Retention of excess uric acid and other poisonous waste is apt to give rise to a dull, tired feeling and, often, toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is sometimes shown by burning or scanty passage of secretions. More and more people are learning to assist their kidneys by drinking plenty of pure water and the occasional use of Doan's Pills—a tested stimulant diuretic. Ask your neighbor!

"The yellow can with the black band"

PARIS.—Madame will have the stripes on her next season if she is in the latest fashion.

Latest costumes coming from the chic couturiers are made of striped materials especially becoming to the younger and slimmer generation. Sometimes the entire costume is of the stripes but usually the striped coat is worn with a gown which harmonizes with it in color, and in this case, there is a band of the striped material around the bottom of the skirt to tie the two together, so to speak.

A striking striped costume seen at the Ritz recently has a coat of wide stripes of shaded reds with narrow collar and cuffs of red moleskin, worn over a dress of beige jersey with plain bodice and finely-pleated skirt with a band of the shaded red about the bottom. Another has a coat of green shaded stripes and a frock of a plain tight skirt of the same material and the upper part of plain green kasha with a strip of the striped material on one side from neck to waist. A sport coat of black and white checked tweed has a belt across the back and collar and cuffs of long white fur. It is worn with a gown of plain black finished at the bottom with a band of the checks.

Docuillet is showing an original ensemble which consists of a long coat of beige-colored wool with stripes of postage-stamp red, lined with red and with red-dyed lynx collar and cuffs worn with a dress of beige kasha with square pockets, belt, collar and cuffs of the red.

Doucet makes the stripes run vertically instead of horizontally in a combination of beige and red which is one of the season's favorite color schemes. The coat has a beige background with a group of vertical stripes in dull red running down the middle of the front and back.

Striped skirts are being much worn with the smart little velvet reefer jackets and come in all color combinations.

PARIS.—Nothing comes back as regularly as black. In any season, and especially in Paris, a black costume is always chic, but it seems particularly so this year when Parisian couturiers are showing an amazing percentage of black frocks.

Black satin black moires and black velvet all go to make smart coats and frocks. But this does not mean full black, although it is also very chic, but black usually set off with some bright color.

Molyneux and Chanel like black crepe for daytime wear, with its dull crepe surface and its extreme aristocracy. Lanvin is using black kasha which is also very distinguished. Girls of eighteen summers are wearing black broadcloth and many Paris dressmakers are using it for sports costumes.

One of the great successes of the season is a black broadcloth sports ensemble, called "Pickwick." It is in three pieces with a two-thirds coat and a one-third jacket. The skirt is straight black broadcloth with a straight waist and a gift of white crepe de chine buttoned up the front. The jacket is of black cotton velvet.

Lucien Lelong is showing an elegant heavy black pile velvet coat with brown martin cuffs and collar. The bodice of the frock is in black crepe de chine and the skirt straight with inverted pleats set at each side of the front.

Nicole Groult makes a smart afternoon costume with the back half of the sleeves in velvet as well as the back half of the bodice and the front in henna satin. The skirt is made of two tiers. And tiers, by the way, are a very important item of fall fashion.

This dressmaker is also having a delightful black velvet zouave bolero worn over a pink georgette frock. The sash is of narrow black velvet and the bolero embroidered in pink pearls.

The steel framework of the Stringer Brothers Plumbing Supply foundry has been completed at Gadsden. The first unit is 200 feet square.

TODAY 12 Years Ago

From The Daily of
October 19, 1914.

Floyd Worley, well known local boy, has asked permission to dive from the Tennessee river bridge.

Sixty-three suits have been filed by the City of New Decatur against several firms for collection of street paving assessments.

Chief of Police Cobb has declared war on vagrants in New Decatur.

T. H. Alexander, of the Nashville Tennessean, was the guest of friends here yesterday.

Little Wesley Holland continues ill at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Holland.

Queen Marie will visit the first line trenches. She plans to spend four days in Chicago. The Nashville Banner remarks no one ever accused her of lacking courage.

The republican spell-binders may be convincing, but they will have difficult time making the cotton farmers believe that ten cent cotton is an integral part of a prosperity wave.

All kinds of charges were made in Texas during the recent heated political campaign out there, but these new allegations against James Ferguson are something out of the ordinary.

Co-operation is necessary, even in Soviet Russia. Rather than tear down this spirit of co-operation, Trotsky is said to have capitulated to his political enemies.

The veteran employees of the Louisville and Nashville railroad company have perfected a "Veterans' Club," of which a local unit has been organized. The Daily wishes for the organization all of the rich success to which it is entitled.

A new kind of Halloween celebration will be staged in Fort Worth Sunday night. Ten thousand will march in a parade to express faith in Rev. J. Frank Norris, who goes to trial soon on a charge of murder.

North Alabama citizens, at least will agree with Senator Norris, that the election of his democratic opponent is preferable to the election of William S. Vare, republican senatorial candidate in Pennsylvania.

Gene Tunney is said to be peeved because the sport writers have not given him the credit he believes is his just due in winning the world's heavyweight boxing championship. Tunney forgets that the public still delights in those who can "sock." He failed to knock out his man.

Take a lesson from the bee. While a hive of bees was trapped in a fast moving freight car on the Santa Fe, they continued to make honey and persons who found the hive, when the car was given to the Louisville and Nashville yards for repairs, received a fine supply of honey.

Henry Ford is to be asked to purchase, along with other financiers, a total of 1,000,000 bales of cotton: If the Detroit goes in the cotton market to that extent, he will have won the everlasting gratitude of the Southern farmers, to say nothing of winning a place as champion cotton buyer of the world.

LOCAL PEOPLE STILL HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO SERVE COMMUNITY

Due to the tireless energy of the little band of civic workers which has labored for weeks in an effort to put over an industrial project here, the goal is not so far away as it was. There still is needed, however, a considerable sum and The Daily takes this opportunity to plead with those who have not done their full civic duty at this time to do so now.

Albany and Decatur never had a brighter opportunity for expansion than now presents itself. Surely every citizen should be willing to aid in this advancement. Unfortunately, however, such has not been the case. Many citizens have subscribed nothing whatever to the movement. Others have subscribed much less than their full share. Now the opportunity for both of these classes to do something for their cities.

CITY OF ALBANY PREPARES TO IMPROVE ITS FINANCIAL STATUS

According to present indications, the Albany city council soon will undertake to increase the tax rate in Albany two mills, which additional revenue, the aldermen believe, will go far toward improvement of the financial condition of the municipality.

The Daily realizes that the proposal of the council will not be pleasing to everybody, but it bespeaks for the officials the careful and serious consideration of all citizens and tax-payers.

Tax increases are never popular and The Daily feels sure that the members of the new council are not considering a tax raise with any view in mind except a desire to render public service. The city simply needs additional revenue, and the only method by which additional fixed income may be made sure is by a tax increase.

The people of Albany, The Daily feels, are sufficiently public spirited to accept the proposal in the same spirit in which it is extended.

The city council will have many perplexing problems to solve during the ensuing two years, particularly in the matter of finance, but The Daily is confident in the belief they will be able to solve these questions.

EXTENSIVE PROGRAM ARRANGED IN OBSERVANCE OF NAVY DAY.

The Navy League of America has arranged an elaborate program for October 27, when Americans will pause to render honor to the navy, always the nation's first line of defense. In the larger centers, speakers will tell of the past exploits of the navy and its hopes for the future. In the smaller communities, vast radio audiences will hear similar messages.

President Coolidge and other leading government officials and private citizens have given their endorsement of Navy Day and participation in the program will be widespread.

The purpose of Navy Day as stated by Walter Bruce Howe, president of the Navy League, in a letter to Secretary Wilbur is to better acquaint the American public with the Navy and the importance of sea power in its wider sense which includes foreign trade, merchant shipping and naval protection.

"The necessity for protecting our shores and maintaining foreign policies like the Monroe Doctrine," says Mr. Howe, "are often pointed out. The dependence of practically every American industry on essential imports and the fact that our export trade is the margin of our national prosperity are not so well known," he adds, and says, "It is to center thought on these questions as well as to pay tribute to the past and present services of the navy to the nation that Navy Day is annually observed."

Naval vessels will visit seaports on Navy Day, prominent speakers from the Navy itself, from Congress and other walks of life will speak in many cities. What is perhaps the most elaborate radio program ever attempted for a patriotic occasion has been arranged through the co-operation of the Broadcasting Company of America, the Radio Corporation of America, the Amateur Relay League and about sixty independent stations and commercial telegraph lines. Patriotic societies are sponsoring the observance.

CHEERING NOTE IN CHORUS OF COMPLAINT AGAINST DRY LAW HEARD.

In the chorus of complaint that the American youths are headed to the demitison bow-wows because of prohibition, the declaration of Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, principal of Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., is a cheering note.

In the current issue of Harpers Magazine, he asserts that the popularity of the hip flask is steadily waning among the undergraduates, and that the spirit of adventure, which caused so many youngsters to resort to secret drinking, after public places were prohibited, is losing its charm, familiarity having convinced the younger generation that little is gained by the surreptitious contact with what frequently is only a poisonous concoction.

"The earlier reactions of the younger generation to the adoption of national prohibition, which resulted in such distressing excesses, were inspired largely by a spirit of bravado and adventure," Dr. Stearns explains in the November Harpers Magazine.

"Only as they began to think for themselves did their attitude change; and that change has been steady and pronounced."

Dr. Stearns quotes the results of the nation-wide poll of colleges and universities as composite testimony that drinking among college students is distinctly less than ever before.

The attitude of youth toward prohibition is saner than that of middle age, he points out, because youth has the habit of looking facts in the face.

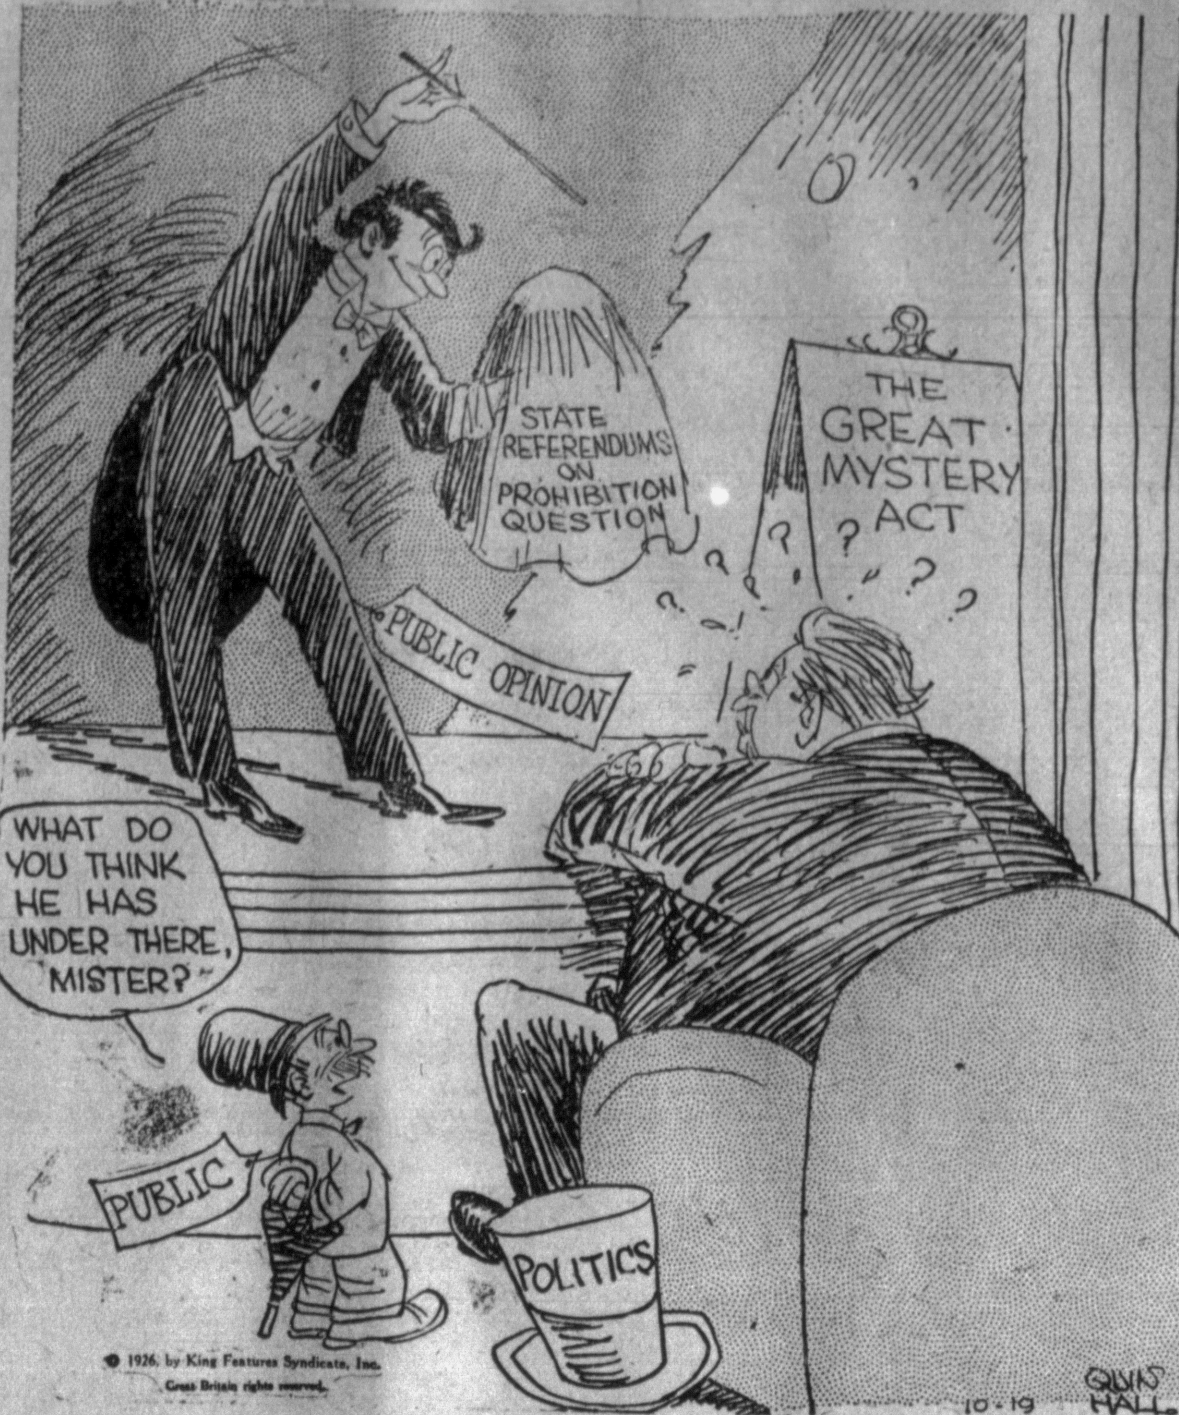

"Nothing seems better calculated to develop hypocrisy and encourage sham among a large group of otherwise sane and respectable people than the liquor question of today. The curious and so often contradictory attitude of this group youth watches with increased misgivings; and youth is not favorably impressed. To its ears the constant and noisy talk about 'personal liberty' does not ring true. On every side it sees accepted conditions where personal liberty is gladly surrendered for the common good, the more gladly when that common good reacts to the direct benefit of the one who makes the sacrifice."

"Father and father's friends may talk themselves hoarse about their right to personal liberty in the matter of drink, but would speedily call the police if the drunken driver of an automobile, exercising his equal right to that same personal liberty, decided to drive on the wrong side of the street and collided with their car. Wherever and whenever these advocates behave like respectable citizens and civilized men they are surrendering a definite amount of that personal liberty for which, on other occasions, they shout so lustily. All this youth sees and more than dimly comprehends."

"Youth must and will find a way out of the present muddle. Already our boys are leading the way. But the tragedy of it all is that this hard task must be accomplished not, as in all fairness it should be, with the whole-hearted help and support of those of older and supposedly wiser years, but against and in spite of them."

If all the "witnesses" to the Hall-Mills murder really were present at the time of the tragedy, Tex Rickard overlooked a fine opportunity to charge admission.

THIS SUSPENSE IS AWFUL

FARMERS DESIRE ELECTRIC SERVICE

President O'Neal Is Pleased With The Farm Interest

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The current issue of Powergrams, published for the Alabama Power Company, contains an article of interest to the rural population of Alabama. The story was written by E. A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, Montgomery.

Mr. O'Neal's article in part follows: "During the last two years I have talked with a great number of farmers about electricity and I have failed to find one who does not want electricity in his home and for use on his farm. I am convinced that every progressive farmer wants electricity if he can get it at a price he can afford. Furthermore, I am convinced that farmers are willing to co-operate with the power companies, and with themselves in order that they may enjoy electricity."

"My study of the question convinces me that several distinct advantages are coming to farm life along with rural transmission lines. In the first place, I believe that these lines will be community builders, and that this is of major importance because the highest rural development is by communities."

"I can see (and the results so far will cluster in communities along justify my vision) that farmers electric lines; and that this community life will result in better schools and churches, more of both the luxuries and necessities of life, a satisfying social condition; and that individualism will be broken down and replaced by the co-operative spirit."

"Decentralization of industry will be another big result. History teaches us that industries have clustered around power and that wherever power goes, industries follow. So then, we may conclude that there will be small industries along our rural electric lines."

"These industries will provide a home market for farm products. Freight charges will be reduced, there will be less waste, employment will be available for idle labor, there will be more tax-paying property, and the movement of money in the community will be steady throughout the year."

"The chief advantage of this development will be of a proper balance between agriculture and industry which is just as necessary as diversification in farming."

"In the home powerful and far-reaching changes will be made."

back to the time when you abandoned a dirty, smoky and inconvenient oil lamp to use an electric light? Think also what it means for your family to have electricity for cooking, ironing, pumping water, minor power jobs, and for numerous household duties, which we are familiar.

"Summarizing, electricity promises to revolutionize agriculture just as it is doing for industry. It will make the farmer more efficient and make life satisfying for him and his family. Furthermore, it will make him a co-operator, a result which I have referred to briefly, but yet it is one of the most important."

TONGUE IS A MIRROR OF THE STOMACH

When Thrust Out Before a Glass It Gives a Hint of One's Physical Condition—Watch This Unfailing "Periscope" of the Health.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WHEN you have a coated tongue what does it mean and what do you do about it?

A long time ago a wise man said, "The tongue is the mirror of the stomach." You can't look into the stomach, but you can get a very good idea of how the stomach is behaving by looking at the tongue.

A coated tongue indicates disordered digestion. Nine times out of ten, disordered digestion is due to improper eating, or the eating of improper food.

It is a shame the way the average man neglects or abuses his stomach. He makes a playhouse of it, dumping into its dark recesses all sorts of food and drink, regardless of the needs of the body or the possibilities of digestion.

It is rather a common experience in an insane asylum to have a patient who swallows everything he can get down his gullet. A friend of mine, surgeon in an asylum, opened a man's stomach to take out a collection of hardware.

He found a pocket knife, several keys, metal buttons, several short pieces of wire and three feet of dog chain!

You excuse this on the ground that the man was crazy. What do you say about another man who eats three pounds of beefsteak, a chicken, a dozen pancakes, six doughnuts, ten slices of bread, a lobster, six dishes of ice-cream, cake, pie, six cups of coffee and a few glasses of other beverages? Many a man eats the equivalent of this schedule every day of the week and considers himself sane. I wonder if he lists his stomach and stomach capacity are not uniform. Digestive powers vary.

The stomach, intestines, liver and kidneys of some persons seem set to deal with great quantities of food. But such persons are rare, and even they would be better off if they reduced the intake.

The average man cannot eat to excess without suffering for his errors. His efficiency is reduced and his life shortened by such a program. If he would look at his tongue occasionally and see written there the record of his indiscretion he would reform, if he is wise.

When you feel "down at the heels," with no "pep" or energy to do your regular work, have a headache and other pains, look in the glass and see how your tongue is. If it is thickly coated you must conclude at once that your eating habits are wrong, or that your digestive organs are on strike.

Constipation is too common a symptom in this country. It shows a wrong selection of foods, or neglect of the intestinal function. The contents of the bowels ferment and poison the system. No wonder the tongue is coated.

If you don't feel well, cut down on your food. Reduce the quantity of everything you are accustomed to eat. Better still, leave off all food for a day.

Increase the quantity of drinking water. Drink twice as much as usual.

Give yourself more rest, more sleep, more exercise, more recreation. Try to get rid of your worries, but whatever else you do or do not do, reduce your intake of

A REPORT from London says Turkey has mobilized four army corps, sending them "to the threatened region."

That region is supposed to be Smyrna, in which the energetic Mussolini is deeply interested.

Interesting definite news, and not pleasant, may come from Europe at any time.

SENATOR LODGE believes that life exists on innumerable worlds throughout the universe. Wallace, a great scientist, went completely astray in his book, "Man's Place in the Universe," endeavoring to show that this little earth is the only planet inhabited by thinking beings.

ON earth we see life springing up everywhere, struggling on the highest mountains, in the depths of the ocean, at the North Pole and on the Equator. Life is as widely spread here as the ninety odd elements that make up all creation.

Why assume that thought, which is the message of life, is an accidental production of this small planet?

SIR OLIVER LODGE believes in a directing cosmic mind, and describes the universe as "a work-shop full of running machines. The machines appear self-working and complete, but are full of evidences of design to accomplish a certain object."

THOMAS A. EDISON thought he could almost prove that there is no such thing as a soul. He agreed with the mournful Herbert Spencer, declaring in his old age that his intelligence forbade him to look forward to anything except annihilation.

EDISON changes his mind about the soul—thinks it may exist.

It isn't old age or the grave frightening Edison into a change of heart. He still insists, "my brain is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a soul," and has described the brain as "a mechanism," like any other machine.

But he would smile at a savage, listening at a telephone, and saying, "my brain is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a voice at the other end."

CYRUS H. K. CURTIS tells the world through his newspapers that in New York last week one man lost $800,000 in three days trying to play craps. To spend almost a million dollars to watch little spotted cubes roll over seems silly, but it is part of the wisdom of Providence.

The shad lays over 40,000 eggs. Most of the little shad die. She doesn't need so many.

A fool collects thousands and millions of dollars, and most of them slip away from him. He doesn't deserve them.

WALL STREET was not so happy Friday, prices dropping One automobile concern, Hudson and Essex, cut prices again and its stock dropped, speculators assuming that price cuts mean difficulty in selling. They may mean greater skill in producing. That's for you to decide. Whatever else you do, don't gamble in stocks, or you will be sorry.

ASQUITH gives up leadership of the British liberal party and Lloyd George is on top again. Many, including the British Tories and the German Kaiser have learned that Lloyd George is a hard man to beat.

FIFTH AVENUE is to have a new two-million-dollar church in the Gothic style. Foxes that have holes and the birds that have nests, not in the Gothic style, will notice that there has been a great change in 1,900 years.

Over the wireless, through the mysterious ether, and in big type, comes the news that Queen Marie, of Rumania, ate buckwheat cakes for breakfast, chicken a la Maryland and corn fritters for luncheon.

Let her eat "lobster a la Newburgh" for dinner, taking a cocktail or two before, ice cream after.

this is the land of dyspepsia. WESTERN UNION wire experts complain of the Northern light flash-in, in the far North. Messages all over the country are interfered with cables under the ocean also. We don't know much about electricity, or anything else.

In the first eight months of 1926 this country used 367,000,000 more gallons of gasoline than in 1925. That's good news. It means many billion miles more travel, more seeing America first. The circulation of population through the country's highways is as important as circulation of blood through the body.

THOUGHT OF THE WEEK

By J. A. West

A REVERIE
Hieing myself away from man made surroundings, going out into the woodlands, sitting and observing nature in all its variety of loveliness, I received a new lesson on the fulfillment of a year, as looking up I observed the colorful leaves well past maturity, having changed from green to varied hues, after fulfilling the mission for which they were sent, and will soon fall.

The wildwoods how beautiful! It is there now that one may get a real lesson of life for each blade of grass, each wild flower, each clinging vine, each shrub, each tree, all have done their very best, and have come to full harvest, expressed in the falling leaves, the faded blossom, all having reached the pinnacle of growth for the year, and are soon to shorn of their loveliness, and will go back to mother earth.

In the growth of the year all was orderly. Not a discord arose among them as to which occupied the most conspicuous place in the plan of the Creator. There was no vying each with the other as to which was the most beautiful, or performed the most needed mission. The modest violet, hid away among the boulders, unnoticed to the passerby except on close observance, put forth all its strength, gathering life from the soil and showers, as the sun by day and the dews of night imparted to it the varied colorings, making it attractive to behold.

Just in front of me is a cliff, hovering with thousands of tons of massive rock, centuries old no doubt, its perpendicular limestone walls standing as if defying modern civilization to molest its quiet surroundings.

Some day no doubt these tons of rock will be used in the art of making cement which will be utilized in building homes, bridges and highways of the future, as Nature goes quietly preparing it for future use.

Near me is a large scaly bark hickory tree. Just at this moment I heard one of its brown nuts fall to the earth and just at that moment it had completed its growth and fulfillment, and is ready to be gathered.

Close to my right can be heard the gurgling waters from two bold mountain springs as they dash out from massive rocks, and darting down the steep mountainside hurrying as they go, singing a pleasing melody all along the way.

Very soon all these surroundings will be wrapt in sombre colors, as "winter with its hoary locks and breath," encompasses all about in frost and snow, as each element seemingly falls asleep.

How true of the life which we live. After a brief span, we too, shall fall asleep, and like the returning springtime when these material things will burst forth from the seeming inanimation which encompasses them, and verdure and blossoms will again return to further beautify a beautiful world.

With the beautiful object lesson, we too cling to the doctrine of the resurrection, when the vital part of our being—the soul, bursts its bonds and comes forth from its prison house of clay, to share in that life eternal for all the just.

FASHIONS in pulchritude change. The girl of today, slender as a reed, with shorn locks and knee-length skirts was hardly considered a beauty a thousand years ago. The Greeks and Romans would have looked upon her as an undeveloped fledgling waiting for maturity.

But fashions in virtue have not changed—perceptibly. Faith, Hope and Charity, the three graces of long ago still claim their share of applause. They are still the most highly respected qualities in the world—and they deserve to be.

But where Faith and Hope and Charity are embodied in the person of Beauty and Youth, they are triply attractive. For with these qualities anyone may go far. And Youth may climb to unlimited heights.

Slush Fund Trial Is On In Chicago

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—(AP)—The trial of a reputed "slush fund" for the independent senatorial candidacy of Hugh S. Magill of Chicago was followed today by the Senate Campaign funds committee. Besides Magill, Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, the chairman and sole member of the committee here had summoned the Rev. Robert O'Brien, a Methodist preacher of Chicago, who was quoted yesterday by two anti-saloon league officials as having said from $300,000 to $400,000 for Magill's campaign had been assured.

Schools Lose By Cotton Picking

Morgan county school attendance, particularly in the rural sections, is being reduced by the necessity for many young people engaging in gathering of the cotton crop. In some families it was explained the low price offered for the staple has made it imperative that members of the family of the planter, instead of hired help, pick the cotton.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my early teens and am in love with a boy of my own age, who says he loves me.

Two boys told him some terrible things about me, which were not true, and since then he has acted differently.

What must I do to regain his love?

BROWNIE.

BROWNIE: If this young man has more faith in mere acquaintances than he has in you, then he isn't worthy of your friendship. You must explain to him that the rumors he heard were false, and that he will have to take your word for it. Then, if he still persists in doubting your word, you must drop him from your list of friends and stop worrying about him.

HONOLULU.—The Hawaiian people take to politics as a duck takes to water, a fact that is borne home to the community every other autumn as the Republican and Democratic campaigns for legislative and municipal offices begin warming up in preparation for the November elections.

From one end of the territory to the other the Hawaiian people turn out—men, women and children, attending the huge outdoor meetings night after night and showing far more political zeal, let it be said, than do their white brothers and sisters.

Local campaigns never lack for candidates, and this year the number of entries in the primary race has been exceptionally large. To glance over the list, it seems as if almost everybody or his brother is a candidate for something.

One of the most interesting features of the election campaigns in Honolulu is the "soap box" at King and Bethel streets, where candidates on both sides gather at noon each day to tell why they should be elected to office. J. K. (Two Gun) Mokuia, popular rent car driver and proprietor of the only strictly Hawaiian restaurant in the city, presides over the ancient altar of civic rights. Mokuia is a huge, but graceful man—a perfect type of the old Hawaiian that is becoming all too scarce in these parts. A lauhala hat, fully three feet across the brim, tops his mighty form in pleasing proportion and gives ponderance to his words.

"Two Gun" presides with much dignity. He never takes sides in an argument, but he sees that every candidate has a square deal. "Have a heart, give this fellow a chance" he will say when some heckler starts to bother a speaker. Hawaiian whites, with tourist visitors scattered here and there; Chinese, Japanese, Portuguese and numerous mixtures make up the soap box crowds, and for the most part they are a laughing, good natured set, always willing to give the speaker his due.

Now and then some speaker attempts a plea based on race prejudice, but Mokuia nips him before he gets under way. "Have a heart," he will again admonish, "We all American in Hawaii." Mokuia got the nickname of "Two Guns" some years ago when two highwaymen attempted to hold him up on a lonely bit of road between here and Pearl City peninsula. He flashed two big revolvers on the bandits and brought them to jail.

Six round-the-world cruise ships will call at Honolulu this autumn and winter for two and three day stays. The first of these is the Holland-America liner Ryndam, due here on October 19 with 450 students on a seven months "floating university" cruise. Next will be the Cunard liner Carinthia, which will be in port November 7 and 8 before clearing for Yokohama. The Belgand of the Red Star line will be in Honolulu from January 8 to 10 and will be followed by the Cunard liner Franconia, due here February 3, sailing from here for Apia, Samoa. The California of the same line will be in port the following week for two days before sailing for Japan. On the last leg of her 27,000 mile cruise, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland will arrive from the Orient in St. Patrick's day, March 17 and will be in port two days.

Because of the low price being offered for cotton many fields in the Southern part of Alabama swept by the recent hurricane have been abandoned and left to the elements.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Birmingham-Southern College will begin international debating this year with a contest with Oxford University, England, in Birmingham November 5.

Arrangements for the forensic battle have been perfected for the reception of the visitors from across the Atlantic in their tour of the Southern states and the Southwest. Prohibition will be debated, Birmingham-Southern upholding the American system for downing the liquor traffic. Each team will be composed of three members. The contest will be staged in the auditorium of the student activity building on the Birmingham-Southern campus.

People To Buy Lillian Bridge

BAY MINETTE, Ala., Oct. 19.—(AP)—Purchase of Lillian Bridge, connecting Baldwin and Escambia counties over Perdido Bay, is expected to become an early reality. The people of the two sections would thereby become owners of this important link for communications and transportation.

A free bridge at Lillian has been needed for some years, it is declared by those who are behind the proposal to acquire the bridge.

Added tourist travel and easier flow of commerce are pointed to as some of the advantages to be derived from such a move.

Documents Given To Grand Jurors

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Papers and documents obtained from a safety deposit box in a local bank, were laid before the Marion county grand jury today by Mildred Meade, 23-year-old confidante of D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana Ku Klux Klan grand dragon.

Miss Meade is regarded by investigators of the charges of conspiracy between Stephenson and state officials, as a "key" witness and it is believed her information will have an important bearing on allegations made by Thomas H. Adams, publisher of the Vincennes Commercial and other members of the Indiana republican editorial association.

Shortly after Miss Meade appeared before the grand jury, she went with William H. Remy, prosecuting attorney, to an Indianapolis bank, procured papers from a safety deposit box and returned to the grand jury chamber.

Demand For Industrial Labor Seen In Sixth District At The Present

Sufficient Employment In This State With Exception of Slight Surplus Unskilled Labor, District Report Shows.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 19.—(AP)—A gradual increase in demand for industrial labor is shown in the report for September issued by The United States Department of Labor for the Sixth District, embracing Kentucky, Alabama, Tennessee, and Mississippi.

Better industrial conditions are reported with the advent of autumn business. The survey for Alabama is as follows:

General—There is sufficient employment in most localities in this state to fully employ the resident supply of labor with the exception of a slight surplus of unskilled workers in one or two sections. Nearly all of the major industries report increased activity and working forces. A very satisfactory increase was made during the last 30 days in the forces employed in textile mills with most of these concerns running full time and the labor supply and demand very well balanced. An increase in employment was made at the coal mines and a slight shortage of coalminers is reported.

Lumber mills report a small shortage of unskilled labor. The iron and steel industry, cotton seed oil mills, food and kindred products plants, stone, glass and clay products plants, and chemical manufacturing plants made substantial gains in employment. Railroad repair shops registered some reductions. Building is very active in the larger cities and towns and is giving full employment to these tradesmen. A shortage of cotton pickers exists in some sections.

Birmingham industrial district, including Bessemer, Ensley and Fairfield—A very encouraging employment increase was made in the principal manufacturing industries of this district and the labor supply and demand are very well balanced, except for a small surplus of unskilled labor. The iron and steel industry, textile mills, food and kindred products plants and stone, glass and clay products plants increased their forces. The opening of cotton seed oil mills has also given employment to a considerable number of workers, and the demand for cotton workers has absorbed many workers.

Mobile—The labor supply and demand of all classes seem to be very well balanced at present, almost all plants running on full time schedules. Gains in employment were made in the iron and steel industry, furniture manufacturing plants and lumber mills. A street paving program to cost $430,000 and storm sewer work to cost $75,000 are under construction, affording employment to a large number of unskilled workers.

Montgomery—The majority of the local plants are running full time, one large cotton mill operating overtime. A small surplus of unskilled labor exists. Several large building projects are under way, including a $300,000 annex to a bank, a $250,000 annex to a hotel and a Masonic temple to cost $200,000; building tradesmen are well employed. The demand for farm hands continues brisk.

Anniston—A slight increase in employment occurred during the month although some part time operations were evident among local plants and two cotton mills were closed. A surplus of unskilled labor is still evident. These concerns reporting an increase in employment were the iron and steel industry, chemical manufacturing plants and textile plants.

Tuscaloosa—All plants reporting are on full time schedules and a small increase in employment was made during the month. The gains noted were in the iron and steel industry and in cotton oil mills which opened during the month. There is a slight shortage of skilled workers but a surplus of unskilled workers exists. An unusually large building program is under way affording steady employment to the local supply of building tradesmen. Sewer and water main extensions, street paving and the extension of city gas mains are giving employment to a number of unskilled workers. Shortage of cotton pickers is apparent in this district.

'COOPERATION' ON COTTON PROMISED

No Final Conclusion Reached, Says Chairman

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Co-operation of the President's cotton committee was promised representatives of the Memphis cotton conference today by Chairman Eugene Meyer, during a conference in which the South's problems, arising from the record cotton production, was discussed.

"We arrived at no definite conclusion," B. W. Gilgore, chairman of the American Cotton Growers' Exchange, stated. "We think, however, we will work out a solution. The cotton committee has given us full co-operation in working out the problem."

Mr. Gilgore, who was accompanied by Oscar Johnston, of Memphis, stated that the problem had settled down to two main factors, first, orderly marketing of the crop over a longer period of time than usual, and second, reducing next year's acreage by 25 per cent.

"If the farmers can be kept in a position to hold their cotton until a price of 15 cents a pound is obtained, they will break even," Gilgore said.

Lynchburg, Va.—"I have taken Cardui several times for a run-down condition and have found it perfectly splendid," says Mrs. Lee T. Marsh, 715 First Street, this city.

"About ten years ago," she explains, "I became so weak I could not go about. I looked like a skeleton and... was dreadfully worried about myself. A friend suggested Cardui and I decided to try it. I kept up the medicine until I had taken six bottles. It regulated and built me up. I improved greatly. Last year we drove up here through the country from Florida. I was exposed to the weather and must have taken cold, for I became ill. I got run-down, lost flesh, could not sleep and had no appetite at all. I was so nervous that I did not know what to do. I thought of Cardui. I began to take it regularly and it was not long before I began to feel better. I took six bottles, one after another, and at the finish of the last one was perfectly well again. Since then I have continued gaining in weight and all winter have been in perfect health." Sold by all druggists. NC-172

The sheik's coming back to town! Yes, it's Rudolph Valentino, and he's billed to appear on the screen next Thursday and Friday at the Princess Theater in a sequel to the story which brought him his greatest fame.

"The Son of the Sheik" is the title of Valentino's latest United Artists picture, which was produced by John W. Considine, Jr. The original tale upon which the scenario is based was written by E. M. Hull.

From all reports, the dashing Rudy has carried out his determination to make "The Son of the Sheik" the most entertaining and lavish of all his pictures and to establish a record for all future desert romances to aim at. "The Son of the Sheik" was directed by George Fitzmaurice.

Valentino has surrounded himself with a notable supporting cast including Vilma Banky, his leading lady for the second consecutive time; Agnes Ayres, who rose to fame with Rudy in the original "Sheik"; George Fawcett, veteran character actor; Montagu Love, who plays one of the chief villains; the huge Karl Dane, of "Big Parade" fame; Bull Montana, in a role totally different from anything he has ever acted; Erwin Connelly, who won new laurels for his work in Norma Talmadge's "Kiki"; Charles Requa and other sterling players.

In addition to the highly amusing scenes, "The Son of the Sheik" is offered to the public by Manager Smith as one of the greatest thrill pictures ever filmed.

The Alabama State Highway Commission has authorized the marking of through federal highways in the state.

SERIOUS CHARGE MADE BY TEXAN

Ferguson Offered to Get Contracts, Says Witness

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 19.—(AP)—Charges that James E. Ferguson, husband of Governor Myriam A. Ferguson, had offered to obtain road maintenance contracts, for money consideration, were made here today before the legislative committee investigating state departments.

J. D. Winder, highway contractor, of Belleville, Texas, testified that Ferguson had made a proposition to obtain contracts in five counties for $7,500 to be delivered to Ferguson in $5 and $10 bills. The offer was made in April 1925, the witness said.

John L. Lunsford will be the new license inspector for Jefferson county, succeeding Mrs. Ethel Hawley.

Do Your Nerves Trouble You?

With stomach, bowels, kidneys and liver working properly there can be no nervous exhaustion, headaches, dizziness, constipation, pains in the back. In nearly every case of nervousness and a rundown condition of health, the remedy most needed is a good general tonic. Men and women everywhere have obtained amazing results with Lyko, because it contains medicinal ingredients that not only aid digestion and regulate the bowels, but act on the kidneys and liver. It therefore tones up the whole system. The great secret of Lyko is the formula by which these ingredients are combined so effectively. Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of this great health and strength builder. Let one trial prove that it will do for you what it has done for thousands of ailing women.

Relief at Once
"I was subject to constipation, my kidneys were out of order and I was run-down and so nervous I could hardly sit still. I was advised by my physician to try Lyko. I got relief at once. I feel like a new woman now."—Mrs. R. Sledge, an Alabama lady writes.

Says It Is Tonic for Stomach and Bowels
J. D. Miller, of Chicago, writes: "We have been using Lyko for many years and find it the best tonic for stomach and bowels we have ever used."

This LYKO MEDICINE CO., Kansas City, Mo. Gentleman: Send a trial bottle of Lyko. I will pay 10c to help pay postage and packing.

Business People
Gather With Farm
Leaders For Talk

The need for the market was stressed by County Agent Ford. Mr. Ford is of the opinion that if there has ever been a proper time for the launching of such a movement, that the time is the present. Mr. Ford talked of the curb market in connection with slumping cotton prices. He reviewed the situation over the county and believed that with the proper market offered here that universal interest in the upbuilding of the cities by country folk and a like interest on the part of the county seat people toward the remainder of the county will result from the mingling of people at these markets.

This market should begin in the spring, along in February or March," declared Mr. Ford, "I anticipate that the results from the first month will strengthen the position of the market in the years to follow. Albany-Decatur needs to take additional interest in the doings of the people in the country and the county people must be taught to come here."

Business Men Respond
Business men meeting with the farm leaders responded readily to the plan for the market, realizing the tremendous advantage offered both producer and consumer.

Foster H. Pointer, local wholesaler, discussed methods for the purchasing of surplus which the former might have. Mr. Pointer saw no reason why an agency could not be established to take care of whatever surplus products left after the market closed for the day.

B. C. Shelton, newspaper man, saw no obstacles in the path of the day.

Project and saw the forthcoming endorsement of business interests and housewives.

Charles T. Rountree, lumberman who has had considerable experience with the marketing of farm products, at once saw the need for such a market here, explaining the difficulties which farmers have met in finding markets for their goods.

Fred S. Hunt, Home Oil Mill official and chairman of the Farm Relations movement of the Kiwanis club, heartily favored the curb market, telling of the market at other points and believing that sufficient interest will be taken here to make the market a success.

A. A. Jones, Decatur Fertilizer Co., and president of the Kiwanis club, would lend its endorsement after consideration has been given the idea.

The next three months will be spent in preparation of the first market to be held here. The plan thus far is only in the formative stages and much is necessary before the opening date.

"From the Iris," he said. The yacht's pennant was engraved in colours on the flap of the envelope. "It feels like a chit from G. H. Q. dropped into a dugout surrounded by the enemy." He laughed and ripped it open. And together they read a letter from Pollock written in a hand that always thought of printers.

"Nar then come on art 'o that— we've blinkin' well got ter see 'oo's master 'ere."

Aboard the S. Y. Iris.
Three o'clock in the morning.
My dear Tony:

This letter, containing a dreadful piece of news, will be taken later on by Evans in the launch to your island and given by him to the first native that he can find to deliver to you at once. With this warning as to the reason of my writing I prefer to lead up to the thing itself with the elaboration of certain details which (once a journalist always a journalist) will give you a mental picture of what we have been through.

Last night, during dinner in this fascinating bay, Sherwood was noticeably nervous and preoccupied. From the moment that we sat down to the moment that we went out to watch the lights in the town, and the glowworms among the fringe of trees, he spoke only in answer to a direct question, and then like a man throwing an empty bottle out of the window of a train. I mean that his brain seemed to be attached so completely to one line of concentration that he passed over questions as an express train over a bridge. Lady George gave him up as a bad job. Lumley respected his obvious desire to be left to himself with inviolable courtesy, and I said a few good things when the prattling Kitty had so large a mouthful that she was physically obliged to let me in. There were women, and she is one, either from a wish to show off, or a childish excitement, chose that moment in which to say nothing as loudly as they can when they are seated with the sort of people from whom every one desires to hear. Bridge was presently suggested—I think by me—and, always obliging, Lumley left the smoking room in order to find Sherwood, and was gone some time. He returned to tell us that finally he had discovered our friend writing in the library, very pale and with the word on his face a noticeable red. He declined, brusquely, to make a fourth then, and later, and just as Lumley was moving gracefully away, he looked up with a very peculiar smile, called out, "I'm damned sorry for you, Colonel. You're a perfect wonder. Good-bye." This, I need hardly say, Lumley refrained from repeating in the presence of his wife. He told it to me when, after an attack of hysterics, Lady George had been persuaded to go to bed.

And so we played outlast, which is, as you have heard me say, the matter to twelve by the ship's bell, that a report echoed and re-echoed from the several hills. It was commented on by us with various unemotional conjectures, and at that. But five minutes later, a young steward rushed in excitedly, and as he announced the fact that Mr. Sherwood had committed suicide. We sprang to our feet—Kitty suspecting her whisky, Lumley—I proceeded at once to his cabin. I was on my way, as I am stomachic and weak, and there, truly and tragically enough, was our very generous host. He had blown out his father unceremoniously.

Pinned to the chest of his pajamas was the enclosed sealed letter, addressed, as you will see, to your sweet wife, and as there was written upon it "Send Evans at once with this to the Island," I have carried out those orders, waiting only for a more reasonable hour than this is. I am really agitated. So are Lumley, the captain, the stewards, and those of the officers whom we have seen. There was, of course, a sensation. The smoking room was the general meeting place, where Kitty, as I think they say in America "drew a bit," and I blamed the unoffending Lumley in the usual way. To me, as to them, the deed is unaccountable, perhaps the letter to Mrs. Tony will shed some light. This, I warn you, must be preserved, and shown in the corner, if there is one here. The question that rises to my lips at this moment is "Who is going to pay her yacht's expenses on her way back to Southampton?"

Yours in grief, mystification and anxiety.
MORTIMER POLLOCK.
Damonides had fallen victim to his own greed.

For a moment neither spoke. With an unaffected gesture Tony removed his cap and with a wrinkled forehead sat gazing at the floor—Poor old Teddy. The man on whose sofa he had slept so often when he had been utterly without the price of a room; whose cigarettes he had smoked by the hundred, whose hospitality he had worn to shreds, who had introduced him to Chrissie, who had loved as fiercely as he had hated. The man who had never once, throughout the whole of the war, flinched from duty or wavered in his loyalty to his friend in charge. . . .

And then Chrissie clasped her hands like a child, and shut her eyes, and, in a low voice, said, "Oh, God, be kind—be very kind to poor old Teddy who has not been well."

And after a little while, thinking back to that distant night when she herself had made every preparation to take the same short cut to death, had gone with this man to the Covent Garden Ball to dance to the foot of the grave, and through him had met Tony, she opened the other letter and held it out so that it could be read by her husband.

Dear Chrissie:
I am writing this to you during a few hours of cold and cruel sanity that may have been brought on by the astonishing beauty of this place tonight. I don't know. It was when I was standing alone on the deck before dinner, watching the sunset, that something went flick in my brain like the turning on of a strong light. In that I saw the futility and the feebleness of what I have been trying to do. Your words came back to me. "Where he goes I go," and I realized then, for the first time, your everlasting love for Tony and the fact that if he dies you will follow him. I haven't got a chance. And so, knowing that I shall be mad again tomorrow, I am going to take advantage of this respite to get out of both your ways, calmly, deliberately, and with deep apologies for having worried you so much. Good-bye, Chrissie. God bless you, dear. And when you read this, and know that you are free from the danger of my jealousy and passion, tell Tony to keep an eye on Quex. He's a bad man, and means to stop at nothing to retain possession of the island. I will do what I can to help you both in spirit, if I am to be given any sort of chance at last.

Yours in death as in life,
TEDDY SHERWOOD.

The door of the bedroom was flung open. With the fumes of alcohol in his brain and a lust for blood in his eyes, there stood Bill Quex, mountainous, unwashed, evil.

"Nar then, come on art 'o that— we've blinkin' well got ter see 'oo's master 'ere."

"Good morning," said Tony coolly. "It so happens that we have something else to discuss at this moment. Be cool enough to make yourself scarce, will you?"

The wind went out of the gross creature for a moment. God's truth, here's a blinkin' bit of cheek. But it came back in a sufficient quantity to enable him to roar.

"Ver 'ard wot I said. I ain't in no mood for messin' 'abart ter-day, fist jist up and come on art and we can git ter business quick."

"I never conduct business before ten o'clock," said Tony. "You will let us have breakfast at once, please, and as soon after that as I feel like it, I will proceed to demonstrate to you who's master 'ere."

The astonishment on Bill Quex's ugly face was almost comic. "You'll be in 'abit eight bleedin' pieces in five minutes, if yer don't do wot I tell yer, me swanky London lad."

Tony got up slowly. "The ace of the German Flying Force dropping bombs on hospital," he said to himself. "This is where you nip in quick." And with all the Wing Commander that was in him, he sprang at Quex and hit him in the jaw.

The benighted heathen reeled into the sitting room, but kept his feet; and as Tony followed him to land his left again, gave orders to half a dozen natives, huddled there, who went for Tony in a hurricane and laid him down.

"You brute, you coward," cried Chrissie, and with the flaming courage of a mother tigress began to kick the brown bodies in the struggling mass.

With an iron grip upon her arm, Quex hauled her away and held her. "Now then, yer blinkin' toff, I'll tell yer somethin'," he shouted. "This 'ere island is mine, d'ye see, with all that's on it. I tell yer so, and yer can take it from me that's right."

A heave, a readjustment of glistening bodies, a flying man's curse. "You coward, you bully," a lightning grip, the everlasting booming of the sea, a loud guffaw.

"The chart in Chrissie's stocking burned like a mustard plaster."

"Listen 'ere, Master Sterling," blinkin'-Fortescue. "And over that chart like a nice young feller wiv a wee affection for yer bones, and yer shall 'ave breakfast wiv kind old Uncle Bill and chat abart the weather. Be a blinkin' fool, and go again my authority, and you shall cough it up in the little room you object to, where there screams come from last night. Take yer choice, cockle. It's all 'ere time ter me."

"If you dare," said Chrissie, "I'll call on every white man in Apia to bring you to the law."

Saints Heralded As District Heads

The St. Bernard eleven is being talked as the coming champion from north Alabama, as result of their defeat handed Woodlawn last Friday 14-0. The Saints presented a versatile attacking ability that completely threw the Woodlawn team into despair. The Saints previously defeated Albany Hi in a merciless search for touchdowns.

If the Saints come through without defeat and Albany Hi comes home with no more defeats, it is likely that post season game talk on the Albany lot will be heard.

Falkville May Be Given Game

Provided Falkville Hi has an open date it is likely that that team will be asked to engage the Albany Hi cohorts during the present season. Albany Hi has one open date and it is not the wish of athletic directors that the team be allowed a lay-off, fearing they may become stale on the job. Falkville has another good team this year and likely would cause considerable trouble for the local team. The game, if played, will be scheduled for Malone Park.

LOST IN THE SCRAMBLE

Alabama And Georgia Loom Again As Southern Title Contenders For Year

It's about the same lineup this year—that is the same it has been for the past three years, Alabama and Georgia are leading the conference pack in the S. I. C. Georgia has nothing like the titular strength of the Alabama eleven, but nevertheless she is classed as a leader in this neck of the woods.

The Tide has now gone through three conference tilts and the best her foes could do was rush across one touchdown while the Tidesmen were galloping toward the goal line so many times it became monotonous.

The Tide has defeated the Mississippi Aggies, Vanderbilt and Georgia Tech thus far in the conference race and the Crimson folk will cause more misery as the year rolls on. Frankly, there seems to be no team again this year to take the measure of the Crimson outfit, of course causing much grief in Alabama sporting circles.

Georgia is going to come into this state on Thanksgiving, but she has about as much chance as ham and eggs with a hobo. Georgia may sail serenely on until Thanksgiving, but at that moment she will halt to take stock, become a bit frightened at the horde of Crimson warriors and then take to her heels in an effort to latch hold of Crimson wearers who are six points bound.

Of the other conference elevens there is apparently little to be said. Florida is a miserable failure this year, likely to drop at least two more tilts. Georgia Tech naturally is out of the running. Auburn went down before Louisiana State, Tulane dropped before the Technicians.

Sewanee is due to put up a game fight this week in Birmingham, but likewise due to find that all Crimson strength is not on paper.

Washington & Lee is standing at bay with Georgia Tech to worry with during the coming week. The Generals loomed as a title contender until they met the Kentucky Wildcats. The Generals won the game, but apparently went dead on their feet. In the past four weeks the Generals have played at Charleston, West Va., Princeton, N. J., Lexington, Ky., and now they journey to Atlanta, Ga. So much traveling is not calculated to keep the lads in fighting trim and although they have suffered defeat but once and that at the hands of the Mighty West Virginia Mountaineer, it is likely that the Generals will bow before the Tech Tornado this week-end in Atlanta. In that event the Generals will be ranked down in the depths of the conference pile.

Virginia Polytechnic is showing some strength this year, but is likely to fall within the next week or so before the charges of Washington & Lee's Generals. V. P. I. has a mental handicap of having won but a single game in the past 16 years against the Generals.

So the title battle has narrowed to a scant margin already, that is if you pick the number of teams in comparison with the number of entries to begin with. So far as the race itself is concerned there is only one champion, that champion is Alabama. Alabama is coming through again this year with a record equally as brilliant as the record made last year and perhaps they will even get a chance to travel westward again. Only a miracle can keep Georgia and Washington & Lee in the running and inasmuch as this day and time is a day of realities then it is hardly probable that the two will be menacing Alabama at the race conclusion.

Fire loss of $100,000 recently visited the tipples and washers of the Black Diamond Coal company at Johns.

The champion checker player of the Gulf States Steel company's Y. M. C. A., has been chosen. He is Louis Williams.

Athens will be host to the fourteenth annual meeting of the Alabama Woman's Synodical Society of Missions of the Presbyterian Church, beginning October 19.

Plucky Old Vet

Although the Civil War service had so imbued J. W. Hinderson, of Pulaski, with the "never give up" spirit that when told by doctors that his case of "cystitis," complicated by prostate gland enlargement, was practically hopeless, he tried Cystone and now is cured.

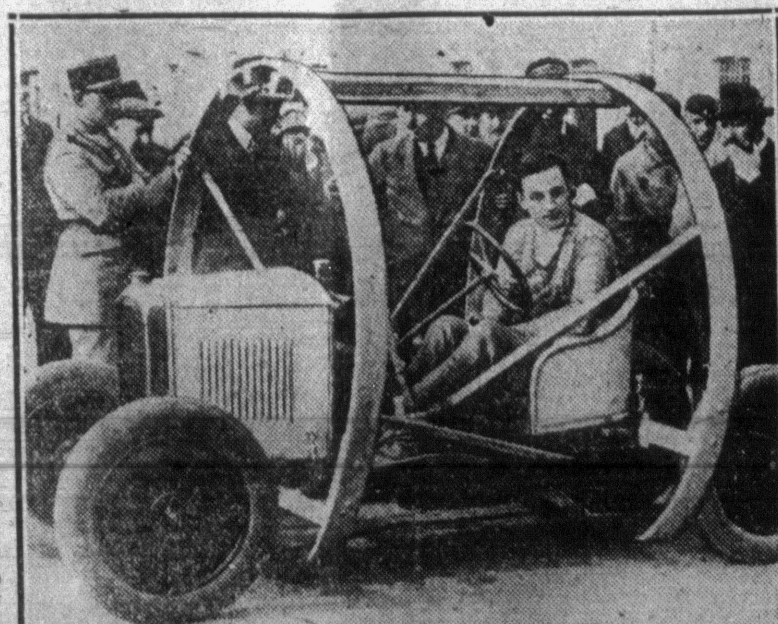

This old Confederate, who surrendered with Lee at Appomattox, is now at the age of 83, feeling fine, and grateful for the relief Cystone gave him after years of suffering with kidney and bladder troubles, sleepless nights and worrisome days.

Cystone made on the formula based on the long used prescription of a regular physician can be purchased at all drug stores—$1.25.

SPORT LEGIONS GROWING HERE

Increased Attendance At Local Games Is Season Feature

Sporting legions in Albany-Decatur apparently are on the increase, judging from the crowds attending the various football tilts of Albany and Decatur Hi schools.

Much of the increase is seen in the personages of high school and grammar school students who seem to be taking a great deal more interest in the sport this year than ever before. Teachers and athletic directors have injected the right amount of enthusiasm in pep meetings and the response of the student body has brought quite a few outsiders to see the team in gridiron action.

Student bodies are not content with giving the teams support on the field, but take the thoroughfares of the cities by storm after the game, provided local teams have been fortunate in securing victory.

The indication for a good year grows better as each week rolls along, both teams expecting to go forward giving the best and grabbing verdicts from other north Alabama elevens.

Don't hesitate to invest your money in Albany-Decatur and Alabama products, they are as good as the world can turn out, in a great many cases the best on the market.

"HAVE A CAMEL" IS MUSIC TO YOUR EARS

Camel is totally different from any other smoke. . . . It is more than a cigarette. . . . A lighted Camel is smoking enjoyment realized—the closest thing to the perfection of taste this old earth ever knew.

Camel's popularity has no equal. Camel demand exceeds any other cigarette preference ever known. To say "Camel" is to ask for the world's most popular cigarette. And to light a Camel is to taste the best.

For there's a solid reason back of the fame and the enjoyment of Camels. Quality. Camels are rolled of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos money can buy . . . blended for matchless taste and fragrance.

If you would know how mild and mellow a smoke can really be, just treat yourself to a pack of Camels. Once you know what these words mean, they're music . . . "Have a Camel!"
